

Make it count: with no weights, strength only builds when sets finish hard. Take every set to RPE 8-9 (~2 reps left in the tank) · lower for 3 seconds · pick the single-leg / single-arm version over the two-limb one · do jumps first, fresh — quiet, springy landings.

Deload / light / maintenance weeks: cap everything at 2 sets per exercise, RPE 6, ~25 min — crisp, never grinding. Skip the jumps; keep pogo hops light and springy.

Why it's built this way: strength work improves running economy 2-8% (Blagrove 2018; Balsalobre-Fernández 2016) · light loads only build strength taken close to failure — hence RPE 8-9 (Schoenfeld 2017) · plyometric hops improved running economy in 6 weeks with zero equipment (Spurrs 2003) · band-at-the-ankles walks and single-leg work top the glute-medius EMG charts (DiStefano 2009) · the calves drive more propulsion than any other muscle group in running, so single-leg heel raises get their own slot.
